abr3HINGTON - The gold to y and dental fillings of conation camp victims were Ed with the bank gold pluned hy the Nazis, then resmelted it traded abroad. That was one f the conclusions of the longwaited American report on Nazi old released yesterday. However, it could not be deterclevined how much of the victims' regold is at stake, nor was there evidence that the neutral states knew they were hnying tainted gold, according to the report of 11 federal agencies, conducted under the leadership of Undersecretary of Commerce Stuart Eizenstat.

The nentrals' acceptance of Winning card stolen gold helped sustain the Nazi regime and prolong its war effort and number long past the time when these countries had any legitimate reason to fear German invasion, the report said, noting that the Swiss were the principal bankers and financial brokers for the Nazis, handling vast sums of gold and hard currency.

The victims were not only victims of the Holocaust, Eizenstat said at a State Department hriefing, "but of the sad combination of indifference on the part of neutrals and inaction on the part of the Allies. However, the report says, the US has "no desire to single out a country that is a robust democracy, a generous contributor to humanitarian efforts, and a valued partner of the US today."

Eizenstat stressed that the 207page report was a search for the facts that "seeks neither to defend or offend any nation." And it does not seem to do either. While virtually all neutrals and the Allies came in for some criticism in the Eizenstat report, it was fairly mild, highly qualified and shy of any major discovery.

In many ways, it appeared that the revelation was that the American government had just discovered some of the Allied role in the Holocaust.

"No country, including the United States, did as much as it might have or should have to save innocent victims of Nazi persecution - Jews, Gypsies, political opponents, and others," said the report. But it also noted that "none of these nations caused World War II or started the Holocaust."

The Eizenstat report, which is "preliminary and incomplete," offers no policy guidance and does not suggest future American action other than a possible international conference of historians. But Eizenstat called for a "substantial portion" of the $70 million in socalled residual gold to be used for the victims of Nazi atrocities. Switzerland officially welcomed the report. "Switzerland has made it clear from the outset that we want to know the truth," Ambassador Thomas Borer said,

Jewish Agency demands West return Nazi loot

Jewish Agency Chairman Avraham Burg yesterday demanded that Western nations investigate their World War II activities.

"It is clear that a lot of different governments around the world were involved in one way or another, and the immediate reaction is to seal all of the Western vaults, central or private banks with looted assets and to return them to Jewish hands," Burg said. The veil which for 50 years shrouded crime layered upon crime, the looting of the dead, is beginning to rise."

Burg spoke after the release of a report, compiled by US Commerce Undersecretary Stuart Eizenstat, that criticized Switzerland for using its neutrality as an excuse to do business with Nazi Germany and faulted American officials for not negotiating stronger to force the Swiss to make reparations. Burg said governments involved in the postwar transfer of Jewish funds should finance an effort "to locate all assets and their legitimate heirs" through a "comprehensive investigation of the millions of documents in archives worldwide." State Comptroller Miriam Ben-Porat has given Attorney-General Elyakim Rubinstein information about three incidents in which crimes may have been committed, that were uncovered during the research for her annual report, she told a news conference yesterday. She added that she is still considering whether to do the same in three other cases. In general, she said, the 47th annual State Comptroller's Report, released yesterday, was one of the most serious the area of government corruption. Ben-Poral was speaking after presenting her report to President Ezer Weizman and Knesset Speaker Dan Tichon. The 1,105-page report summarizes audits conducted of the activities of ministries, state agencies, and the defense establishment, during 1995 and 1996. Ben-Porat would not disclose which cases had been referred to the attorney-general. But Israel Radio reported that one involved the prime minister's adviser on immigrant affairs, who was said to have directed funds to an association for immigrant teachers that he had founded. According to an unconfirmed report, another case involved the attempt to appoint Yoaz Ben-Ari as legal adviser to the Prime Minister's Office. The instances cited, she said, related to both to the present govemment and the previous one.

Other report highlights: · The appointment of unqualified political activists to senior positions continues. The Prime Minister's Office and the Housing Ministry under the current government were cited in particular for · The IDF's battle readiness is dropping. Reserves are poorly trained, and ammunition, weapons, and other vital eminment is maintained in army warehouses. Nearly half the population does not have updated gas masks. Officials in various ministries responsible for approving allocations from bequests to the state were often involved with the organizations whose applications they approved.

Ben-Porat mulls Barak probe

State Comptroller Miriam Ben-Porat reopened a Pandora's box yesterday, when she told reporters she is considering a new probe into whether MK Ehud Barak, a contender for leadership in the Labor Party, acted properly in the training accident at Tze'elim in 1992, when he was chief of general staff.

Ben-Porat said she has completed her investigations into the military aspects of the Tze'elim B incident, but still has serious doubts about whether to try to determine if Barak acted correctly with regard to evacuating the wounded.

She said that "five years have elapsed" since the accusations that Barak and his deputy left the scene before all the wounded had received medical attention.

Ben-Porat said she had been approached "by the families, by the former chief of general staff, and by others concerned" to examine the issue.

"[Barak] absolutely begged me to carry out an investigation," she said. "I am aware of the heavy shadow cast npon him" by the accusations. "He is someone who may perhaps one day lead the country. Peoples' fates are dependent on this."

But Ben-Porat said that any investigation would now require a "confrontation process among witnesses ... some prolonged legal action. [Barak] says one thing and there are those who say the exact opposite.

"It is not yet clear whether we will present a report and make suggestions," Ben-Porat said. "I hope there is no basis to allegations that a chief of general staff left his wounded behind. If there were, however, I would not hold hack. I have serious difficulties in getting to the bottom of the matter. And without facts, there can be no justice."

In response, Barak said that he had asked that the matter be investigated. "I am convinced that the truth will be good for me, and I am also sure that since the facts are quite clear-cut, this investigation can be very speedy." Botsheva Tsur

Settlers rebuild demolished houses

By MARGOT DUDKEVITCH and MICHAL YUDELMAN

Settlers in Yitzhar began rebuilding three houses on a hilltop some 800 meters east of the settlement yesterday, less than 24 hours after security and civil authorities forcibly evacuated about 30 protesters and demolished the structures. No IDF troops were present.

Meanwhile, yesterday's security cabinet meeting turned into a stormy political debate, as a number of ministers sharply criticized the demolition.

Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu and Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai both came under fire. They reportedly assured the ministers that the demolition did not indicate a change of policy.

Yitzhar secretary Yehuda Liebman said three temporary structures, made from wood and canvas, had been erected so that three families would be able to move in. One of the families has 10 children.

He said a steady stream of visitors arrived at the site to show support. "The phones didn't stop ringing." he added.

But the only politician to show up was MK Rehavam Ze'evi (Moledet), who told Israel Television: "This government carried out what no other government before dared to do."

Yesterday morning, leaders of the Council of Jewish Communities in Judea, Samaria, and Gaza informed Netanyahu that they would not show up for a scheduled meeting. "The council regards the demolishing of houses as an extremely serious incident, especially when people live in those houses," secretary-general Aharon Domb said in an interview on Anutz 7 radio.

But, he added, "It appears that although Netanyahu supports

US envoy Dennis Ross arrived yesterday for meetings with Israeli and Palestinian leaders, amid hopes for an American initiative that might break the two-month impasse in peace talks.

Media reports said Ross brings proposals that include tradeoffs such as an Israeli freeze on settlement construction and Palestinian Authority Chairman Yasser Arafat resuming the sharing of intelligence information, which was cut off in March. Ross made no comment as he entered the Prime Minister's Office last night for talks with Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu. Cabinet secretary Danny Naveh. and advisers Dore Gold and Yitzhak Molcho joined them for the first part of the meeting. Ross is to meet with Arafat and

By SARAH HONIG

MK Ehud Barak, front-runner in the Labor leadership contest, last night welcomed State Comptroller Miriam Ben-Porat's interest in probing deeper into his role in the Tze'elim B tragedy.

Barak said he wants "the truth to come out. I am sure that the comptroller's examination of the events would exonerate [me]. A short, quick examination could bring the truth to light."

the Bar-On Affair. Netanyahu, 100, said the aide, had to call for an investigation, exuding confidence that he would be vindicated. The few sentences the comptroller devoted to the Tze'elim B affair yesterday were enough to cause ripples of excitement throughout the party. The consensus was that, even though it was certain that the comptroller would have no findings by primary day, the nuances of Barak's problem, it was said, was that he was not let off the hook

Merom is technically right. But, as he spoke, anti-Barak forces in the party were eagerly pointing to the empty half of the cup. While they were careful not to pronounce Barak guilty, they referred to him as "soiled."

Their argument between now and June 3 would be to put a question mark oo Barak's suitability to go forth as Labor's candidate for prime minister. They will warn that in the event that Barak wins the nomination, he will be open to actual future election, the matter may come back to haunt him, but even then it will only underscore prevalent tendencies and will not tilt the pendulum one way or the other. The press will not go after Barak and it will be left to his political foes to unleash this weapon.

In the final month before the primary, the feeling in Barak's entourage is that the extent of the shadow the Tze'elim B affair will cast on him depends solely on the eye of the beholder. Those antagonistic to Barak's aspirations will perceive a dark shadow, while, to those who firmly supported Barak from the outset, it will be largely invisible.

By MARGOT DUDKEVITCH Some 800 people gathered last night to air their views regarding the present government at a conference sponsored jointly by the Land of Israel Front and the Council of Samaria, and Gaza at the Jerusalem International Conference Center, Amid calls to oust Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai, who was called directly responsible for the demolition of three houses in Yitzhar on Tuesday, the general consensus was to support the present government and point Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu in the right direction.

"People view Mordechai as We'll still support PM woman Yehudit Tayar. "The idea was to gather and allow people to expected from Barak. He all but had to say what he did, his political allies said.

But the fact is, it was agreed in most party quarters that there is oo way the comptroller's words added to his political health. An aide to one of Barak's rivals in the June 3 party leadership primary said yesterday that Barak wanted and needed the controller's probe about as much as Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu wanted the police investigation into his role in brought back to the surface an event which he had hoped would have by oow sunk far beneath the current political agenda.

As things stand now, the cup for him is both half full and half empty.

Barak booster MK Haggai Merom pointed to the former yesterday, noting that, "after all, the comptroller did not make accusations. She has no overwhelming compelling evidence against him. Nothing had been proved."

Border Police anti-infiltration unit displayed

By ARIEH O'SULLIVAN

The Border Police showed off its special anti-infiltration unit, some operating on ATVs, in the latest edition of the IDF weekly Bamahane. The unit, called Matilan, tries to catch Palestinians trying to sneak across the Green Line and has been operating for the past year. Matilan is an acronym for the Hebrew words for intelligence, lookout, firing, combat, andmobility.

"These are small and quick units," said Cmdr. Yisrael Sadan, head of the Border Police. "They are aided with new high-tech equipment and carry out night ambushes using advanced cam-ouflage methods."

The unit was set up following changes in the deployment of the Border Police, whose task is to patrol the 360 kilometer-long Green Line.

Bernding to Bamahane, each ... ontains a small number guting teams made up of both border policemen serving their three-years of mandatory military service and members of the permanent force. All have been trained at the Border Police commando school and gone through a course in military intelligence.

The unit functions around the clock, supplying information to soldiers and police guarding the border. While most of those trying to sneak into Israel are Palestinian laborers without work permits who come looking for jobs, some are infiltrators trying to carry out attacks or pass on information.

"The units' main goal is to supply intelligence information, but they also have the capability to open fire," Sadan was quoted as saying.

The units were recently equipped with ATVs to give them greater freedom of movement, the weekly said.

Border Police personnel chief Asst-Cmdr. Dani Lau was quoted as saying that the new units may soon be opened to women, but this depends on future funding. Despite the establishment of the unit, many living in settlements along the Green Line have complained that hundreds and even thousands of Palestinians sneak across with apparent ease every day.

UN convicts Serb for war crimes

First such guilty verdict since Tokyo, Nuremburg tribunals

THE HAGUE (AP) - A Bosnian Serb was convicted of crimes against humanity yesterday hy a UN court in the first international war crimes trial since World War II.

The Yugoslav war crimes tribunal found Dusan Tadic guilty of 11 of 31 counts of war crimes and crimes against humanity for atrocities committed during Bosnia's war.

He was acquitted of all nine murder charges against him. The 41-year-old karate expert and former cafe owner - charged with murder and torture in and around three Serb-run camps in northwest Bosnia in 1992 stood impassively as the verdicts were read, scribbling notes on a gallery. The three-judge panel's ver-dict was the first following an international trial since military trihunals in Tokyo and Nuremberg sent 17 Axis leaders to the gallows. It came a year to the day after the trial began.

Tribunal spokesman Christian Chartier hailed yesterday's 301-page verdict as "a judicial condemnation of the ethnic cleansing policy." Though Tadic was cleared of the murder charges, he was found guilty of 10 charges of beatings, some loosely consid-ered as torture, and was convict-ed of a broad charge of persecu-tion which included the killings of two Moslem police officers. For that count, he was not specifically found guilty of nur-

Tadic's lawyer, Milan Vujin, said he would appeal. Tadic told his lawyer he wasn't satisfied because "I'm not guilty," Vujin said.

Both sides have 30 days to appeal the verdicts, and Tadic's decision to contest it appeared likely to delay a July 1 sentencing hearing. Tadic had pleaded innocent to all charges, claiming he was a victim of mistaken identity swept up by anthorities france to find scapegoats for atrocities in Bosnia.

A complete acquittal would have raised doubts about the UN tribunal's ability to gather ironclad witness testimony on atrocities that happened during the 3 1/2-year Bosnian war, which ended in 1995 Mirza Hajric, an adviser to Alija Izetbegovic, the Moslem president of the joint Bosnian presidency, said the verdict con-firmed the Bosnian govern-ment's claims "that the Serbian regime has been undertaking, in an organized manner, crimes against humanity and genocide."

"Tadic was a hand of the geno-cide, but the brains — Radovan Karadzic and Gen. Ratko Mladic - are still at large," Hajric said. "As long as they are free. chances are small for the Dayton peace accord to be implement-

"Although this is the first trial conducted by the interna-tional tribunal and thus has some bistoric dimension, the goal of the trial chamber was always first and foremost to provide the accused with the fair trial to which he was entitled," said presiding judge Gabrielle Kirk McDonald of the United States.

"This, we believe, has been done."

KINSHASA (Reuter) - Zaireans hope President Libreville. Mobutu Sese Seko who left for talks in Gabon yesterday never returns.

"The leopard is finished. He is not coming back." shouted an onlonker outside Kinshasa airport as Mobutu's plane took off.

Mohutu, who ruled Zaire with an aura of invincibility for 32 years, is nicknamed the leopard.

Mobutu's close aides insist the president - under international pressure to step down - will be back in a day or two.

But his unceremonial departure added fuel to speculadon that the embattled and cancer-stricken leader had taken a flight into exile to ease efforts to end the country's seven-month civil war.

"Will Mohut finally agree to go?" headlined the opposition daily La Tempete. "The departure of Mobum will avert the worst for Zaireans impoverished hy 32 years of dictatorship."

Mobutu's beavily guarded motorcade took a detour from the main airport road, bypassing stronghold districts of Zaire's militant opposition. He was jeered there by people chanting "go for good" when he drove through last week on his way to Congo.

Soldiers bad earlier driven reporters, news photographers and onlookers out of the airport perimeter when Mobutu and his wife of 17 years, Bobi Ladawa, were driven unto the tarmac.

Aides said 27 close associates had flown to Gabon the day before to prepare for the talks in the capital

The streets of Kinshasa were crowded as Mohutu's motorcade swept to the airport, with many residents coming out to watch and openly ask if the strongman leader would ever return.

But the statutory groups of drummers and dancers wheeled out for presidential departures were absent. So were militants of Mobutu's MPR party, impossible to miss on such occasions in their brightly printed shirts sporting Mohutu's portrait.

There was intense security around the airport - a declared target of the rebels — and Mohutu left on his plane only about 10 minutes after his heavily guarded motorcade arrived.

Combai-ready troops were backed by armored personnel carriers, heavy guns and anti-aircraft weapons to protect him as he entered the VIP lounge. Hundreds of other troops were seen in buildings near the airport.

Mobutu's image of political invincibility has been rubbished hy Laurent Kahila's rebels who now control about three quarters of Zaire's vast territory and are closing in on the capital.

"He will be back in 24 or 48 hours," said presidential spokesman Kabuya Lumuna.

But with Kabila's rebels saying they have the teeming city in their sights, newspapers in the city and ordinary Zaireans speculated that Mohutu, 66, would take advantage of the meeting to slip quietly into exile.

DAMASCUS - Syrian President Hafez al-Assad yesterday held talks with Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati on the Middle East peace process and the sinua-oon in south Lebanon.

Presidential spokesman Joubran Kourieh said Syrian Foreign Minister Farouq al-Shara attended the meeting at the presidential palace. He gave no further details. Velayati told reporters on arrival in Damascus earlier in the day he was carrying a message to Assad from Iran's President Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani dealing with the Middle East situation and bilateral des.

"It is important to convey to our Syrian brothers the outcome of my tour to coordinate and discuss our joint future moves," Velayao said. He was expected to discuss with Syrian leaders the growing military cooperation between Turkey and Israel, which both Syria and Iran regard as a direct threat, and which filled Syrian newspapers yesterday. Diplomats said Velayad's talks covered the situation in south Lebanon where pro-Iranian Hizbullah is fighting the IDF. Velayati had talks in Beirut on Tuesday night with Hizbullah's secretary-general Sheikh Hassan Nasrallah.

"The talks dealt with Israell aggression against the towns, villages and civilians and the role of the Lebanese resistance in confronding them," one official said.

The Iranian minister came from Beirut where he gave President Elias Hrawi an invitadon to attend an Islamic summit in Teheran in December, his first ever visit there. He had given a similar invitation to Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak before coming to Lebanon (Agencies)

Here scans the bride

a recent weekday evening, Rhonda Willey wandered through Macy's in Tysons Corner, Va., recording the bar codes of numerous bouseware items using a hand-held scanner gun. She efficiently zapped such products as Henckel's knife-block set, crystal candlesticks and dozens of wine glasses.

But this was not an inventorycontrol exercise, and Willey is not even a Macy's employee. Instead, the 24-year-old data analyst for Columbia Research Corp. in Arlington, Va., is a bride-to-be who was scanning in her bridal registry at Macy's for gifts for her September wedding.

At department stores and specialty shops across the nation, tradition is meeting technology, changing forever the time-honored way in which hrides and grooms have requested gifts from their wedding guests. Retailers are tapping technology to expand their registry programs and in the process using them as a marketing tool and a way to create a computer-based shopping culture.

But executives also hope that by sessionia sessionia making their registry programs quicker, easier and, well, hipper hy using scanners, touch-screen the Security Cor computer kiosks, the Internet and and has no police le nationwide databases with real-time and arrest suspent undating - they will increase their customer base and build loyalty.

"It's a far more efficient way of doing it, and anything that's efficient is a business opportunity," said Linda Lee, group vice president for special services for Macy's East, "We are always looking at ways to enhance our services, and bridal registry is a significant service that we offer the public." Retailers say the advances are leading to an explosion in the use of gift registries. Not only is the number of tions letter reach registries rising, but couples are signing op for more items - that The Social states scanner is just so much fon - and foris in Francisco more people are accessing nation-We find our selves we wide lists. The technology also saves time.

"Now that we have these guns, oh God, it cuts the time in at least half: it's great," said Lori Bolger, bridal director for Bed, Bath & Beyond Inc, which in April added handheld scanners to 30 stores.

Forpin - white of that "Now they can register twice as many brides in a day." In addition FRANC BEID STATE OF US OF to Macy's and Bed, Bath & working a wand we derive the Beyond, many other chains, includ-WERE A ADDALE TO BEEN ing Hecht's, Target and J.C. Penney, MANAGER 15 network of more than 1,000 stores into a single registry database two years ago. After placing interactive computer kiosks and hand-held scanners in its stores last year, J.C. Penney's registry business grew 83 percent, and it has become a sizable business for the chain, said Roger Murray, systems-development manager of retail stores for J.C. Penney

Major department store companies are connecting their regional divisions into single gift-list databases, so that a shopper at the Bon Marche in Seattle, for example, can call up a list created by a couple at Macy's, its sister store in the Federated chain, in Washington, D.C.

Easing access to the registry lists and expanding them provides an easy and elear way for the chains to track what's selling. "We have very sophisticated reporting, so we look at this not only as a key customer service in the store, but centrally we manage this," said Tamora Ilisat, director of home fashion and gift registry for Hecht's. "We're able to look at the reporting and ._ if our brides [choose] something particular, we can react and intensify the depth of our assortment." Using the scanner has benefits for couples, too. Bridal executives say it's more accurate and more fun than handwritten lists - and also gives the groom-to-be something to do.

The men always do the scanning," joked Susan Hernandez, the bridal consultant helping Willey at Macy's. "Our grooms like it a lot." Even with the steps retailers have taken so far, though, electronicshopping consultants and bridal experts say the retail industry has barely tapped the growing popular-ity of gift registries for a variety of other special occasions, such as births, birthdays and anniversaries.

The Holy Grail of registering is ... to have members from the guest list buy it directly online - that's kind of the goal that everyone had been searching for," said Rob Fassino, director of marketing for Element Studios Inc. of New York, which operates a wedding-resource site on America Online called The Knot.

Eventually, he said, guests might be able to go online, enter a bride or groom's name and immediately get. their wish lists from all the stores at which the couple registered.

But creating such an interactive system remains the one technological bridge retailers haven't yet been able to cross. Ge computer systems involved to communicate and allow interactive shopping is a daunting challenge. Safeguarding consumers' credit-card numbers and providing higher-speed communication are other problems, (The Washington Post) they say.

Covering the period from 1981 to 1996, most of the dresses reflect the creative talents of British designers and include exquisite creations by Catherine Walker, Victor Edelsteio, Harmell, Zandra Rhodes, Bruce Oldfield, Bellville Sassooo, the Emanuels and several other designers.

Each of the gowns - some of them worn only once or twice has a history. An ivory silk crepe sheath gown with matching jacket, designed hy Catherice Walker, was worn at a state banquet during a tour of the Far East. Another Walker creation, a lilac silk crepe eveolog sheath embroidered with violets and roses was worn in Korea in 1992. Walker is obviously the princess's favorite designer and is far more extensively represent-

Many of the dresses are strapless, some of them superbly gathered at the waist or bodice and some rendered a little more demure by the addition of a matching or contrasting bolero style jacket.

The case of the mysterious sardine can

By RUTHIE BLUM

Beware of huving canned goods from for their high calcium content, R.S. began purchasing Yonah Star sardines in soybean oil many years ago. Over the past year, however, R.S. noticed a declice in the quality of the product. She writes: "Sometimes there is a had smell when opening the tin... the sardines are covered with scales, making them unpleasant to eat ... the oil looks dirty and discolored." She also claimed to have written to Yonah Star in Tirat small shops or grocers. Ordered by her doctor to eat sardines Hacarmel, and received oo reply. Yonah Star geoeral manager David Ring adamantly denied having received such a letter of complaint, and assured me that his company esponses the "customer is always right" policy. "We are a highly respected and reputable company owned hy Koor. We produce all of the IDF's canned field ratioos. We have oever ignored a complaint, as we will oot ignore this one."

Ring provided possible explanations for the pheoomenoo described in R.S.'s letter to me: "Perhaps the easy-to-open can [pop top] had beeo tampered with on the shelf hy another customer," he suggested. "Or possibly the alumioum of the can reacted badly with the oil. "But, no matter what the cause was," he continoed, "the customer should phone me today and I will compensate

Indeed, R.S. then phoned Mr. Ring, who oot only agreed to send her several tins to compensate her for those inedible ones, but also to receive a direct order from her for a crate of sardines, if she wishes. He then advised her to purchase her sardines from large chains - such as the Hypercol and Supersol - rather than from oeighborhood grocers.

After personally examining the can of sardines which R.S. sent to me for inspectioo, I was puzzled hy the oumbers "7-62" engraved io the aluminum. If this was the expiration date, I thought, it's oo wonder the sardines were smelly.

Ring assuaged my fears, however, hy explaining the internatiooally used code for dates on canned goods. The "7" represents "1997," and the "62" indicates that it is the 62nd day of the year (i.e. the beginning of March). This "secret code" was appareotly born oot of fear that consumers would panic if they saw an old date on a can - in spite of canned goods having extremely long shelf lives. "The oil in products such as these preserves the contents," explained Ring. "In some cases, it's the older the better - like wine."

Well, it's certainly refreshing to encounter a company that believes io satisfying its customers, hut I still can't figure oot how R.S. could have avoided buying "bad" sardines if the date is coded - and also has no real significance.

Another State Comptroller's Report

the 1,100-page report released yesterday by State Comptroller Miriam Ben-Porat –

chock full of documented waste, fraud and mismanagement - should inspire both anger and admiration at the state of Israeli government and democracy. We cringe at the annual revelations of blatant irresponsibility, some of it life-threatening. We also should be thankful that at least some of our government's foibles are being brought to light, creating an opportunity to do better.

The state comptroller's reports tend to be measured in terms of the most extreme findings. A report is considered "harsh" when it contains more than the usual recommendations for criminal investigation. Ben-Porat herself chose to focus on her findings of cronyism in the appointments process, perhaps because the Bar-On Affair has placed this issue on the front burner.

The sections on improper politicization of govemmeot appointments and contracts do ring loudly in the wake of recent eveots. Ben-Porat called the findings in this arena the "most serious" since she has issued such reports.

In a move directly reminiscent of the Bar-On Affair, Prime Minister's Office Director General Avigdor Lieberman booted the Prime Minister's Office legal adviser, and tried to replace him with a Likud activist. No one is really expecting such appointments to be devoid of politics, and this government is hardly the first to try to fill supposedly apolitical positions with "friendly" people. But the public has a right to expect that the rule of law will be protected by people with some degree of professionalism and independence.

The seriousness of the report, bowever, should not be judged solely by its potential for political consequences, or by findings of possible criminal wrongdoing. Garden-variety bureaucratic negligence can bave devastating consequences, and must be taken seriously even if it does not generate banner headlines.

The report found, for example, that nearly 40,000 drivers had been convicted of 30 or more traffic offenses, and that these recidivist offenders were twice as likely as occasional offenders to cause road accidents. Among the serious recidivists, a full 53% had been convicted for causing an accident, some up to three times. Only a small portion of these repeat offenders have had their licenses permanently revoked, and some of those succeeded in getting their licenses reissued.

These facts, coupled with the fact that the and guidelines on how to deal with them, make a mockery of the supposedly aggressive current police campaign against road accidents. If the authorities continue to ignore demands for a serious and systematic approach toward repeat offeoders, the next step will be lawsuits by grieving families against the state for giving dangerous drivers a license to kill.

Another finding, concerning widespread violation of guidelines for school trip security, is tragically prescient. It is hard to think of a greater responsibility entrusted to public officials than the safety of the nation's schoolchildren. Yet the report found that, of the 20 schools reviewed, only one underwent the required pre-trip inspection to ensure compliance with security guidelines.

One of those guidelines is that school trips are not allowed to enter the Naharayim area, because it is under Jordanian sovereignty and armed Israeli chaperones cannot enter. No one would bave predicted the massacre of seven young girls at Naharayini by a Jordanian soldier, but this is one guideline which, if adhered to, could have prevented a terrible tragedy.

Again, in the section on the IDF, the comptroller's focus on seemingly prosaic areas such as the storage of tanks and coordination between helicopters and ground forces may not be exciting, but clearly - in light of recent events - deserves serious attention. There may be no direct relationship between the February 4 helicopter collision that took 73 lives and the faults found in the program to upgrade CH-53 transport helicopters, but the accident illustrates what is at stake in this area.

The finding that the Golani brigade is torn between training for fighting a conventional war and having to fight a guerrilla war in south Lebanoo and maintain security in Judea and Samaria has important implications for the IDF as a whole. Golani may be the most stressed by conflicting missions, but the IDF in general needs to pay more attention to the difficult task of training for tasks that are not as black-and-white as the conventional battlefield.

In general, the lesson of this year's comptroller's report is that the "micro" matters. Petty corruption and irresponsibility add up, and can lead to unpredictable and tragic consequences. There is much to be proud of in our democracy, including the government's ability to critically analyze itself. But for the criticism to be more than an impressive exercise, the government hureaucracy

Shame at Yitzhar

t a stormy cabinet meeting yesterday, Rafael Eitan A turned to the prime minis-ter in a rage, and said: "When I saw Jewish soldiers destroying the homes of Jews, I nearly wept." Together with Natan Sharansky and Ariel Sbaron, Eitan was expressing the deep anger of many Israelis who turned on their TVs Tuesday night to see bulldozers tearing down homes built on a Samaria hilltop and the violent evacuation of crying women and children.

The extraordinary aspect of the brutal demolition, where little regard was shown for the safety of the people living to the homes, was that they were actually built under the previous, Labor govern-

Despite the Rabin-Peres contempt for senlers, Jewish homes were not demolished then, out of fear of the ensuing outcry from Jews of all political stripes.

This week, however, a so-called right-wing government sent in police and army, 200-strong, to smash three houses to pieces. One was made of stone, two of wood; they were built on land belonging to the settlement of Yitzhar.

Settlers asked angrily: "And what about the 1,700 houses built illegally by Palesunians in Judea and Samaria, in areas still under Israeli control? Anyone driving in the area, as we did recently, will see widespread illegal Arab building going on everywhere, especially close to the bypass roads. We didn't oouce a single policeman or soldier anywhere the brutality of the operation. When this was denied, attendon focused on OC Central Command Maj.-Gen. Uzi Dayan, the man in charge of the operation, who in the past has shown distaste for settlers. But it soon became clear that Dayan was acting under the orders of Defense Minister Mordechai. Then the truth emerged: Binyamin Netanyahu gave his approval for the onslaught on the settlers. The operation was carried out coldly, with deliberate intent. It was, say political insiders, a move by Netanyahu to prove to the Clinton administration that he is the ooly one who can destroy the spirit, and homes, of the settlers - the same people who voted for him.

Netanyahu and Mordechai are competing over who can show the most 'reasonable and conciliatory' face to Clinton

THE demolition occurred in a week when Dennis Ross was preparing to come to Israel to ensure that the peace process gets back into full swing. What has happened is that

This made nonsense of the purpose of building Jewish homes on Har Homa in the first place: to close the circle around Jerusalem and prevent the Palestinians creata solid link between ine Bethlehem and Jerusalem, giving them a firm foothold in the Jewish capital. If Arafat gave the green light for terrorists to attack Jewish civilian targets again, Netanyahu showed the red light to settlers, telling them that their cause is doomed. The harsh truth is that since the elections, exactly 10 housing units have been built in the settlements. A week ago the PLO chief again warned about "settler terrorism," i.e. building bouses. More gestures were required to please the Americansss.

Some government ministers are now talking about competition Netanyahu and between Mordechai over who can show the most "reasonable, conciliatory" face to gain White House approval. Mordechai recently increased his chances by announcthat restrictions on ing Palestinians seeking work in Israel would be lifted completely. Netanyahu countered by approving the smashing of the settlers of Yitzhar by a crack unit of elite soldiers. They did their work as ordered, ruthlessly and efficiently. Then they left the smashed furniture and ruined belongings, including children's books, for Nigerian workers employed by the civil administrauon to deal with.

After the verbal barrage he received from ministers vesterday. Netanyahu said "a regrettable incident had occurred." But he was really telling the White House: "You see? I can do things Labor didn't even dream of doing."

SURIE ACKERMAN

The more things change, the more they stay the same. Though governments come and governments go, it seems corruption, incompetence, and negligence remain.

Reading some of this year's State Comptroller's Report, made me wonder why we taxpayers have to support an office that spends tens of millions of shekels to produce a report many of us might feel we could have written ourselves.

Discriminatory allocations in the Religious Affairs Ministry? Gee, that's news. Patronage in the Housing Ministry? Ho-hum. Improper political appointments in the Prime Minister's Office? Hey, we're three-and-a-half months into the Bar-On Affair, we didn't need Miriani Ben-Porat to tell us about the prime minister's political appointments.

But though many parts of the report sound boringly familiar, there is still enough to scare. The most chilling part was the investi-gation of safety on school trips completed long before the March 13 slaying of seven young girls at Naharayim, where they never should have been.

This means that months before the fateful trip by the Feurst School in Beit Shemesh was probably even planned, investigators from the State Comptroller's Office were poring over records, questioning ministry officials. and talking to principals and teachers. It must have been clear to someone, somewhere along the line, that the investigators were not happy with the answers, and that the report would be a damning one, as indeed it is.

Didn't the presence of the comptroller's auditors inspire anyone to make sure principals

The comptroller's report is more of the usual, plus enough to scare and trip coordinators and guides exercised more care? Obviously not, had this been the case, seven families would probably not be grieving today.

LITTLE SUBSTANCE

Sir, - Although the April 24 UN General Assembly "emergency session" on Israel's building plans in Jerusalem was scheduled for some time, it was instructive to note it was held just two days after 93 innocents, including many women and children, were slaughtered by Islamic extremists in an Algerian village.

The General Assembly debate was prompted by calls by the Arab bloc. When last, one wonders, did the august world body meet in "emergency session" to discuss the tragic situadon in Algeria? Or the Moslem slave trade in the Sudan?

OPINION POLLS

Sir, - In a somewhat confusing article on your front page of April 3, you present findings of a poll which indicate that 51.3 percent of those surveyed would support a Palestinian state "if this would remove the main obstacle to real peace." You also record that 48 percent of those surveyed support the Oslo process; 59 percent said that the chances of war are high; 74 percent fear terrorist attacks. From among these various findings. your headline writer chose: "Majority supports Palestinian

Sir, - In his article of April 20, "The Israeli singularity," A.M. Rosenthal writes: "Netanyahu was be called "a landslide" by casting aside the most basic principle of elected by a landslide Jewish majority."

As anybody who was in this country last May knows - and as Mr. Rosenthal, who takes such minute interest in our affairs from New York should have known as well - the result of the last Israeli elections was diametrically opposite to a landslide. That result was decided by the most narrow of margins and was in doubt until Holon.

it had a roof over it." The Yitzhar settlers were incensed by injuries to five tod-dlers, as Israeli troops and police acted with unnecessary force. Several adults also received first aid at a nearby police station.

TV crewmen recorded the amount of brute force used during the demolition. Adults were thrown to the ground, banging their heads. Blood streamed down their faces. The settlers' screams were heard quite clearly by bystanders.

Shaken by the outcry from some government ministers, the government at first blamed the police for Arab families."

Israel's government has fallen into a trap devised by PLO leader Yasser Arafat, on the advice of Egyptian President Mubarak. Arafat never misses an opportunity to declare that building and settlements constitute "Israeli terror against Palestinians." Now, doubtless with great satisfaction, he watches Jews using violence to crush the Jewish sentement "ter-and there's no money to continue distributing them. I sure hope the Syrians don't find out. Reservists aren't being trained properly, and we're counting on an awful lot of tanks that aren't being stored properly. Oh, and the air force has been cannibalizing some Yasur helicopters to upgrade others.

Remember the Yasur? Two of them collided in February in the North, killing all 73 servicemen aboard.

MAYBE you don't scare that easily. So get mad, instead.

There are people driving around who have been convicted of up to 148 traffic offenses. How does someone get a chance to accumulate that many convictions without being banned from the roads? In any case, banned drivers con-tinue to drive and commit offenses; some even managed to get their licenses reissued and then had to be banned again.

Meanwhile, over a billion dollars is going to be spent on a poorly-olanned highway that will wreck our landscape, increase pollution and still not solve the traffic problems it was meant to solve. Blank identity cards are available for the taking in some Interior Ministry offices. There's a lot of produce being smuggled in from the territories that's been irrigated and sprayed with whoknows-what.

And while funding funny-business is nothing new in the Religious Affairs Ministry, one still can't belp but be taken aback by a government official who says very clearly that the concept of allocating money fairly is irrelevant.

In her report two years ago, Ben-Porat said, "It would seem that all values of morality and principles of truth and fairness have passed from the world." She was referring to the Religious Affairs Ministry, but that statement could apply to any of the ministries and agencies she writes about. After all, it is no more moral to let road risks conunue to drive, or to ignore safety rules when you are in charge of other people's children than it is to favor one nonprofit organization over another.

Given the current government's marked inability to inspire either confidence or competence, it doesn't look like things will change in the foreseeable future. I only wonder what the comptroller's staffers are digging up now.

A Jerusalem bus bombina paralyzed Swiss resident Peter Malina. But that didn't dampen his desire to move to Israel. Uriel Heilman writes fter two grueling years, Yonah Peter Malina's determination has brought him hnme. 1

Malioa - who grew up in Switzerland, not knowing he was Jewish - visited Israel for the first time 10 years agn and immediately fell in love with the country.

But just one year after moving here, his life was suddenly and irrevocably transformed on an August morning in 1995, when a terrorist bomb ripped through the Jerusalem bus he was riding, leaving him paralyzed from the neck down. It has been nearly two years since the incideot, and months since Malina reluctantly left Israel to receive medical treatment at a special facility for paraplegics near Luceme, Switzerland. Since then his one great wish has been to come back and live in Israel.

Yesterday, that wish was finally fulfilled when he arrived on a special flight from Switzerland and was transferred to the Neurological Department at Tel Hashomer Hospital.

Malina, now 30, was born in Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, where his pareots had fled on the eve of the Holocaust to escape Nazi persecution. Having bidden their Jewish roots for so long, first from the Nazis and later from the Communists, Malina was unaware of his Jewish origins until about 10 years ago, when his grandmother urged him to visit Israel. At age 20, he volunteered on a kibbutz and attended Hebrew ulpan, From then on, Malina came back as often as possible, eager to become an Israeli and discover his Jewish heritage. But it was not until 1994 that Malina continued his Jewish identity. After months of searching led him to the municipal archive of Bratislava, he located the birth certificates of his mother and her parents, which contained Hebrew writing. He stopped calling himself Peter and adopted the name Yonah. He insisted on coming here to study despite his parents' entreaties to first complete his degree in international law at the University of Zurich.

After immigrating in 1994, be began studying Judaism at Macbon Meir and Hebrew.at Ulpan Etzion. Teachers and friends describe Malina, who is flueot io six languages, as an excellent and eothusiastic student. He won a prestigious award for his studies at Ulpan Etzion in early 1995 and, according to a letter be wrote that year, felt a certain thrill every time he was addressed in Hebrew.

In his letter of application to Machon Meir, Malina wrote: 'After a few visits to Israel I decided to go back to my origins and started to look for a place where I could study religion and the history of Judaism. I need to first study the basics." But oo the morning of April 21, 1995, his life was tragically altered. That day, while Malina was on a

It has been Malina's courage and stubborn desire to return to Israel that has given him the will to live and the stamina to progress along his difficult path, according to Rabbi Zvi Kleinman, head of the English-speakers' program at Machon Meir. Sharon Katz and Marilyn Cohen are demolition experts - demolition of racial arrogance in South Africa. Sharon is the marquee star of the duo, a Durban resident who helped counter apartheid through music. Marilyn, a transplanted South African originally from Philadelphia, is her manager and unabashed admirer.

"She's the Pied Piper of Peace," Marilyn enthused during an interview. They were here to investigate bringing their good vibes to Israel, and to visit family - Sharon's sister is in Mevasseret Zion, her brother in Ma'agan Michael, and her parents live in Ra'anana.

"I'd say we had incredibly powerful influence," Sharon said reflectively, without a hint of hype. "During the time all the changes were taking place, in 1992, I brought together 500 kids of all different backgrounds and races - black. white, Indian, and the designation 'colored,' Jewish kids as well. With a band that I had put together, I mught them to sing and dance in each other's traditions and cultures, and helped break down this whole apartheid thing. We put on a performance that was nationally televised. "I wanted to show we can have democracy in South Africa. That was the theme, that we can all live together. Response was so great that we decided to take it by train around South Africa." That idea launched her to national reknown. "Sharon Katz & the Peace Train" performed a whistle-stop tour of the country, setting up concerts at eight or 10 train stations along the way.

"It was really amazing: 150 people living on the train together, people from all across the color line. "From a spinitual point of view, we made our mark." The Katz Kidz performed for Nelson Mandela throughout the election period and many times after he was elected. "When I met him the first time, he told me that what we are doing embodied the non-racial democracy he was intending to establish in South Africa. Mandela loved the Peace Train."

"Sharon was imbued with the values - loving your neighbor and fighting oppression - because she was in the Habonim youth movement in Port Elizabeth," Marilyn said. "She started sneaking out to the black townships when she was 15, illegally. She taught herself to play African-style guitar, and taught herself some of the languages." Sharon has the youngsters singing in each other's lingos - and in Hebrew. The kids love "Hinei Mo Tov." And now I'm teaching them "Shir Leshalom"." Her troupe is now 35-not giving up. "We're working on a Cape-to-Cairo Peace Train Tour, the length of Africa. If we can get to Cairo, we should be able to get to Israel."

We can still get to hear them, even if no one finds a way to stage their performance. "In addition to our own album, Crystal Journey, which we released last year, we were invited to submit a song to a compilation album released worldwide just yes-terday [April 30]. It's called Carnival '97, and we're on it with Sting, Pavarotti, Madonna and Elton John." Big stuff - but Sharon and Marilyn are more excited about the little successes

"All the kids come from very difficult backgrounds, they're all victims of poverty and many don't have their own families," Sharon said. "But they've been transformed by this." Marilyn recalled her friend's forays into isolated, dirt-poor rural communities. "Sharon was the first white person many of these kids had seen; I'm sure they thought she was a ghost nt first." Sharon plucked 120 of them from one wretched place to join her initial S00-voice concert.

> Sharon and Marilyn are demolition experts demolition of apartheid.

"The kids didn't know what a stage was. They'd never been anywhere with electricity. At the concert hall, when the stage lights were turned on, their mouths just hung open. Sharon was trying to get them to sing, and we sort of had to push their chins up.

"Then the other kids came, and they found themselves standing next to a white kid on one side, an Indian kid on another. Kids being kids, they were curious, not hostile. They took to each other, showing each other the dance steps, hugging each other, giggling and holding hands. Magic. Marilyn said she gets goosebumps when she thinks of one incident.

"In '92, we were with a group of people in this one township where there'd been a considerable amount of violence. Suddenly a group of about 10 or 15 youths burst in. One of them had what later turned out to be a toy gun. Sharon and I were the only whites around. He gave us a really angry look and he's got this AK-47 in one hand and a rock in another, and 1'm holding my breath figuring, this is it. "But because Sharon's not only an incredible musician but a music therapist, she looks him in the eye and begins to play her guitar to him. He stops in his tracks and listens, and then she motions to him with her guitar that he should arm his AK-47 around and strum it. And the kid does it. "Then she goes over to him, takes her guitar off her neck and puts it around his, and starts to teach him to play. His hostile look turns into an ear-to-ear grin, and within minutes there's a line of kids waiting for their turn to play music. These boys were rough - but she converted gang members into band members. It was an amazing moment. "It's the kind of magic I've seen her do across the country."

be okay because, in fact, nothing is." Today, Malina is still dependent upon a respirator to breathe and speaking remains a great effort. Using his lips, a special breathing device, and diminutive head movements, he is learning to operate a computer that he hopes will eventually enable him to gain some fact. degree of independence, though the doctors expect he will always require 24-bour care.

Ten contributors to a 424-page volume recently published by the Ministry of the Defense try to answer that question in historical terms. According 10 Sapir, these Arabs promised to consider a role for Zionists in Palestine if and when Arabs were afforded semi-independence in certain parts of the Ottoman Empire.

Two years later, Nahum Soknlov, the prominent Zionist leader, visited Damascus and Beirut to meet Arab natiooalists. It was agreed to call a jnint conference to discuss the issue. However, the Ztonists asked to delay it, feariog

The war radically changed everything. The British took Chaim Weizmann, bead of the Zionist Organizatioo, to Palestine, in March, 1918. Stopping over in Cairo, Weizmann was jotroduced to the Higb Commissioner, Sir Reginald Wiogate, who gave the Zionist leader a bit of advice based on his experience in Sudan: Deal with the "real leaders," especially

The governor of Jerusalem, Sir Ronald Storrs, held a reception for Weizmann and his cnlleagues on the "Zinnist Commission," which was attended by many prominent Arabs. Weizmann was deliberately cnociliatory. He assured Storrs that Zionists had absolutely no intention of expelling Arab inhabitants from Palestine, and he promised assistance in economic matters. He even denied that the Zionists intended to establisb a Jewisb administration in the country. However, the Arab reaction was

But Weizmann got the message be beard at the Storrs's residence very clearly. He did not hide his frustration and despair at the next meeting of the Zionist Cooncil.

But, be warned him to pay attention to the effendis , the rich landlnrds and influential mayors in large towns. ## Thousands of habitual traffic offenders remain on the roads

By RAINE MARCUS

Nearly 40,000 drivers have been convicted of 30 or more traffic offenses, and some have been convicted as many as 148 times. the comptroller found, questioning how the responsible bodies could allow drivers with such poor records to remain on the road.

Only six percent of the offenses committed by these drivers were minor ones, like illegal parking. The comptroller found that these seriously recidivist drivers are twice as likely to cause serious road accidents, Of all those convicted of traffic offenses. only 25% had been convicted for causing an accident; while among the serious recidivists, 53% had been convicted for causing an accident, some up to three dimes.

Of those drivers whose convictions spanned 10 years or more, 1,442 had their licenses suspended for various periods of time, and 136 had them permanently revoked. Of those whose licenses had been revoked, at least half continued to drive - 67 committed additional offenses, some of them 10 or more. Several had had licenses reissued to them despite their being banned from the road for life; 22 people had had their licenses "permanently revoked" more than once.

In March 1996, the cabinet ordered the police, the Licensing Bureau, and the courts to compile a comprehensive list of those drivers who had recurring convictions, so as to develop clear guide-lines for dealing with such offenders. This project was to have taken three months.

But by September 1996. the list had sull not been compiled and no guidelines had been formulated.

Unlike other criminal records, traffic offenders are listed in the police databases only by their identity numbers and driver's license numbers, if available - not by name. In many cases identity numbers were recorded incorrectly, leading to offenses being attributed to the wrong person, and making it difficult to trace genuine offenders. Although the Transport Ministry provides police with monthly updates on drivers' and vehicles' details, there were many cases in which two or more drivers are listed under the same identity num-

Over the past few years, the Transport Ministry has been gradually validating its records against those in the population registry, but until the process is completed, police will continue to receive inaccurate information.

This delay becomes more significant as more automated forms of enforcement, such as automatic cameras, are used to caich offenders. If the license plate photographed is not properly matched with the car's owner in the database, such methods of enforcement are frustrated.

The police division responsible for issuing tickets, which give drivers the chance to pay fines or challenge them in court, sends out an average million such notices yearly. Records of such notices are recorded by typists, and mistakes are made.

Statistics gathered from elec-tronic equipment used to cateb offenders are also recorded by typists; here again, mistakes are made, affecting the accuracy of all data stored and subsequently transferred to the courts and the Transport Ministry

A check in the Tel Aviv district revealed that it took an average of 13 to 19 mooths from the date of a road accident to file charges agaiost offenders, a period the comptroller said is far too long.

In response, the Internal Security Ministry wrote that all statistics were transferred in February 1997 to the Instice Ministry's database department. In July 1996, the Traffic Police handed over a list of recidivist drivers to the Transport Ministry.

The Prime Minister's Office, meanwhile, bas instructed the ministry to arrange for the immediate completion of the list of recidivists, and for a team from the Transport Ministry and the courts to formulate guidelines for dealing with them, to include provisions for medical examinations for offeoders, retraining, and revocation of licenses.

Procedures vague for revoking resident status

By DAN IZENBERG

In December 1995, a meeting was held in the attorney-general's office to decide whether to regard Judea, Samaria and Gaza as "outside of Israel" for the purpose of determining whether Arabs of east Jerusalem who were permanent residents lost this status if they moved to the territomanner. In 1993. 40 such people were noted, in 1994, 39 and in 1995. 90.

In the first half of 1996, however, the figure jumped to 400. All of them received a notice, signed by the head of the office that their permaneot residency visa had expired

Poor handling of blank documents leads to identity card forgeries

By DAN IZENBERG

The large waves of immigration and the influx of foreign workers led the comptroller to investigate the procedures for issuing identity cards, the security arrangements for preventing their forgery, and the granting of citizenship to imnligrants from the former Soviet Union.

The forging of identity cards is widespread and in most cases, the illegal documents are prepared on forms stolen from population registry offices, Officials do not store blank identity cards and related documents in safes and do not destroy used cards.

In the Beersheba office, the comptroller found that anyone in the office may handle blank documents and equipment that arrives. The material is not properly stored: bundles of blank identity cards were left unlocked in a room where the public is received.

Security around the offices was found to be inadequate. Furthermore, the Interior Ministry security officer does not follow up in cases where problems have been discovered or break-ins have taken place.

There is no requirement for individuals to report lost or stolen identity cards and there is an ongoing dispute between the police, the ministry, and other security bodies as to the circumstances under which a declaration explaining the loss of the card should be mandatory.

The comptroller recommended that people who claim to have lost their card more than once be required to declare in writing how the card was lost.

It emerged that there is no uniform procedure for issuing new identity cards, and each office operates according to its own arrangements.

In some offices, new identity cards are issued without applicants providing sufficient proof of eligibility.

Although the ministry established a steering committee to oversee production of a state-of-the-art computerized identity card, no timetable has been set for its development and little progress has been fila0c.

Since 1989, 770.000 new immigrants have settled nerc including some 650,000 from the former Soviet Unioo. Inunigrants' identity cards are issued on the basis of occuments provided by the immigrant proving his or her right to citizenship under Israeli law.

As early as 1991, many forged documents were uncovered. Yet the population registry office does not receive advance information from Israeti authorities in the CIS, who process most of the immigration requests before the immigrants arrive here.

As a result, the registrars are often unaware that the applicants before them may have been previously rejected or may have never gone through proper procedures in the CIS and are using forged documents.

In response, the Interior Ministry said that all replacement identity cards are issued with the approval of security authorities.

The ministry also said it plans to provide Border Control with lists of those who received immigrant visas acroad, to prevent people from using forged documents to obtain citizenship.

POLITICAL APPOINTMENTS

In June 1996, the Prime Minister's Office director-general-designate, Avigdor Lieberman, informed the office's legal adviser that he was being dismissed, effective immediately, explaining the dismissal with the intention to appoint some "who thinks more like us.

The man who replaced the legal adviser was a Likud activist and central committee member. The comptroller rejected the Prime Minister's Office's explanation that the legal adviser must "be trusted" by the one who appoints him, namely the prime minister. She stressed that a ministry's legal adviser is not responsible to the body or person that employs him, but to the rule of law. At the attorney-general's order, the new man was not appointed legal adviser but a "special adviser to the prime minister." He received a govemment car and was paid retroactively from July, but did not sign a contract. In November, the man quit. In another case, a worker was employed by special contract as media assistant in the Prime Minister's Office." He was assigned wage grade 38, for which an academic degree and three years' experience are required. The man had neither requirement. He did, however, work for half a year in the Likud headquarters as spokesman.

The Housing Ministry, now run by Deputy Housing Minister Meir Porush, contracted with a personnel company "specializing in the haredi sector" even though the company failed to meet the requirements of the public tender.

Moreover, the ministry's demand for female workers exclusively from the haredi sector in the minister's and director-general's offices, was in violation of the Equal Opportunity Law.

The contractors' registrar, who was fired by former housing minister Binyamin Ben-Eliezer after he was cited for incompetence in a previous comptroller's report, was rehired by the prime minister in his capacity as housing minister, and his replacement was dismissed.

The board of the Arim urban development company added a post of "director-general for special projects" and appointed to it a man lacking any business or infrastructure experience. He was, however, former chairman of the Likud Young Guard, Another unsuitable appointment at the Prazot housing company was made at Porush's request. The comp-troller suggests that the company received a housing project from the ministry in exchange for making the appointment.

In the Religious Affairs Ministry, a secretary was fired for ficutious "cutbacks" so that a Shas activist could replace her.

Rental apartments allocated inefficiently

'Good friends' still get the good jobs

BY NINA GILBERT

Thousands of rental apartments stand empty or are occupied illegally while thousands of people in need of such housing wait for allocations, due to the Housing Ministry's inefficiency.

The comptroller faulted the ministry for not properly using its computer system to keep track of available rental units and to allocate them quickly

In May 1996, for example, 1,146 people waiting for subsidized rental apartments in the central district were registered with Amidar, the government's largest housing company. That month, Amidar said it had only 115 apartments available for assignment

But the comptroller identified some 4,700 apartments which the Housing Ministry and Amidar had not made use of. The apartments included those occupied by squatters and abandoned structures that could have been renovated.

Squatters included those who were relatives of deceased people who had been given subsidized rental housing. Amidar said that in August 1996 there were 312 such cases. In 257 cases, people had simply broken into empty apartments and settled there. These people were allowed to become legal tenants under a legalization order issued by the ministry in May 1996.

The comptroller faulted this practice, however, saying that people who are not eligible for public rental housing are occupying apartments that should be offered to eligible people who have been waiting a long time for help.

The Housing Ministry does not enter data about those waiting for housing or the supply of housing into its computer system. A check in the ministry's central district offices found that the waiting lists for apartments were written out by hand and separate lists were kept by each division - not a reliable formula for assuring efficient allocations.

And even these lists did not include the information needed to allocate the apartments according to ministry priorities. In many cases, residents of subsidized apartments in fact owned other apartments, which made them ineligible for subsidized housing.

The ministry said that since the audit was conducted, it had begun working on changing procedures for the allocation of apartments, including rebuilding the computer system.

training, instructors at the field training bases are less experienced in weapons and tactics than they used to be, reducing reservists' motivation to train. The IDF keeps divisions of tanks and armored personnel carriers (APCs) under specially designed plastic wrap to keep them from aging. An examination of 103 stored tanks showed that some were oot battle-ready, mostly because they were not properly prepared for wrapping. The army admitted that it is having a difficult time maintaining equipment and blamed it on the lack of adequately trained manpower.

A series of cutbacks by the army have led to an "cumulative negative impact" on the readiness the warehonses. Some o£ weapons are lacking and the practice of "borrowing" weapons and equipment from the emergency warebouse units could prove problematic during a real emergency. The training needed to fight a conventional war is different than the training for running security duties, like fighting Hizbullah militiamen in sonth Lebanon or patrolling in the West Bank. As a result of this conflict, the Golani Brigade, the comptroller found, is not being adequately trained for either task. She also ooted that Golani troop training on APCs was "less than minimal."

The hesder company in the brigade - comprised of soldiers who mix military service with yeshiva studies - is lowering the standard of the Golani troops and causing other companies to perform more tasks. It said that after serving 16 months of active service, the hesder soldiers returned to yeshiva studies. After a year they return to serve for another eight months, but at this point their fitness is not up to standard and they need further training before they can assume all their duties.

The report recommended the hesder arrangement be modified so that these soldiers' service is not-split.

In a spot check, the comptroller found that at least one company did not undergo bush training as required before being posted in south Lebanon. It called this a very grave incident," Golani soldiers were also found not to be good marksmen. Mandatory weekly shooting practice for troops in Lebanoo was often not carried out.

The IAF's support helicopter fleet was lacking in non-attack helicopters such as the Yasur, Black Hawk and Bell 212, But the comptroller's main complaint. was that the IDF had yet to determine priorities for giving its infantry forces training flight hours with the Air Force. In general, she noted, the IDF had a too vague idea of bow to use its helicopter force

In a report on the the CH-53 Sikorsky (Yasur) transport helicopters - completed long before the She'ar Yasbuy collision - the comptroller found that the air force had improperly budgeted for its project to give the Yasur improved flight and navigation systems and a head-up display integration, a project known as Yasur 2000.

As a result, the IAF upgraded some CH-53s at the expense of maintenance of other CH-53s.

The report also criticized other solutions, like accepting the Yasur 2000 helicopters before all upgrading was completed, with the unfinished tasks being labeled open malfunctions."

It said the whole project was running 35 percent above planned costs and three years bebind schednle.

In its response, the IDF blamed comptroller on lack of funding, but said there bad been improvement since the report was written. The army has drawn up a plan to quickly raise the level of cnmbat training for reserve soldiers in time of an alert.

Regarding the Gnlani Brigade, the army said it is reexamining company training. It said the training program in the artillery school was being rewritten and more instructors were assigned to artillery to boost training.

As for the Yasur 2000 project, the army said that the delays were made up in 1996. It also explained that the cannibalization of some belicopters was because the fleet of CH-53 helicopters had grown due to a drawdown of US navy chappers, but that the level of supplies had not been

The ILA was also faulted for its procedures in allocating 452 dunams for a golf course and vacation village in northern Ashkelon.

At the end of 1991, the Tourism Ministry recommended that the ILA allocate the land to a specific company without a tender. In February 1992, the ILA Council received a recommendation to this effect. But in June of that year, the council rejected the request, deciding the land would be offered by in a tender. Sometime following that year's elections, the mayor of Ashkelon turned to the then-housing minister, Ben-Eliezer, who also served as the council chairman, and asked for the matter to be brought up again before the council. In November 1992, the ILA Council decided to allocate the another four, 10-year options. According to state comptroller, the terms stated in the contract "absolutely contravened the decision of the ILA council."

Fair funding proposals rejected

By HAIM SHAPIRO

In an earlier report, which examined the ministry's allocations for Torah and haredi cultural programs in 1993 and 1994, the comptroller described the situation by saying "it would seem that all values of morality and principles of truth and fairness had passed from the world."

In February 1995, Shimon Shetreet became religious affairs minister and appointed the Friedman Commission to establish new and fair criteria for such allocations.

However, the commission submitted its findings two days before last May's elections, which resulted in a change of government, and the new ministry officials made it clear that they considered the work of the commission irrelevant. Indeed, the new director-general made no attempt to hide the fact that such allocations are made to further political aims.

"The allocations are intended to further the policies of the ministry administration and the ministry policies are set in accordance with the political structure which is in charge [of the ministry]," the director-general said.

Despite the change in administration, the comptroller said, it was up to the new administration to maintain continuity in the ministry, not to ignore the recommendations of the commission.

Because of a dispute among the coalition partners, the prime minister ended up taking the portfolio and three MKs from the National Religious Party, Shas, and United Torah Judaism directed the work of the ministry and had a say in ministry allocations, a serious contravention of the principle of separation between the legislative and executive branches of government.

In short, attempts to improve the #### procedure for such allocations have not succeeded. Indeed, the comptroller quoted the Friedman Commission as saying that in the absence of any clear criteria, the old system of "special allocations," brokered by the religious parties in negotiations with the finance minister, was probably superior. That the situation has not changed. since the comptroller concluded her survey in November is clear from the 1997 budget, in which the ministry upped its allocations for religious institutions operating nation-wide from NIS 21.3 million in 1996 to NIS 41.5m. this year. The bulk of these institutions are either affiliated to the religious parties or Habad. Among the institutions dropped were those affiliated with the Conservative and Reform movements.

ELECTION RESULTS

Voting violations did not affect results By URIEL HER.MAN

Although there were several violations of voting laws in the 1996 elections, they did not affect the outcome of the election, the comptroller said. A new election may only be called if it is apparent that violations altered the results of the vote.

Last year was the first time the prime minister was chosen by direct elections, and of 3,933,250 eligible voters, 3,121,270 voted for prime minister and 3,119,832 voted for the Knesset. The election law stipulates that voters cannot vote for one and not the other.

To ensure that this violation is not repeated in the next elections, the Central Election Commission suggested requiring voters to insert the envelopes containing their voting slips into two separate boxes.

According to the report, this violation was one of several that occurred at polling stations around the country due to officials' lack of familiarity with the rules and general disregard for election protocol. The CEC said that before the next elections it would publish a rule book and increase supervision at the polls.

There were 61 proven instances of people whn voted twice in the 1996 elections, most of whom were prisoners or hospital patients who voted both in their institutions and at polling stations. Others broke the law by voting in the names of citizens who were abroad or recently deceased.

One MK filed a complaint with the police regarding violations in the prime ministerial vote after a court refused to take action, ruling that the violations did not influence the election results. By the time the comptroller's report was compiled in September 1996, the police investigation had not yet been concluded. The cases of dual voting led the CEC to recommend that law be changed to enable officials to better identify voters. The commission also recommended that national identity cards be technologically updated to allow for more definitive identification.

Sloppy controls in allocations from bequests

were not transferred to the commit-Treasury, to the bequests committee, which funnels funds for the tee.

At the same time, there were "indications of preferential treatment for certain sectors" such as the Arab sector, and "discrimination against other sectors," such as the religious and haredi sectors.

In response, the minister at the time explained that the policy had been to "discriminate in favor of the weak and those on the periphery who had not received in the past." The comptroller ruled that this was adversely affecting the projects involved. Dozens of requests were acceptable.

There was a suspicion of conflict of interests with regard some ministry employees, who were on were not under their purview, and

In 1994 and 1995, the committee received a large bunch of requests marked as "special requests of the minister." Most of them had been filed late and did not have the required documentation, the report said. Some of these institutions, belonging to the Reform and Conservative movements, had earlier applied via the Absorption Ministry for funding and had been turned down. Their requests were then submitted to the bequests committee by the Education Ministry even though the bodies' activities boards of institutions applying for the ministry recommended they be funded.

Requests received by the Absorption Ministry in October 1993 had not yet been completely processed by August 1995 and 50 out of 92 institutions for which grants were approved had not yet received them. This often meant projects were not carried out for lack of funds.

Saspicions of conflicts of interest arose regarding certain senior staff members at the Labor and Social Affairs Ministry, who were involved with institutions that requested grants. Two of them were also members of the ministerial committee

HEALTH MINISTRY

AIDS control, prevention programs deficient

By JUDY SEGEL-ITZKOVICH

The Health Ministry has no central body that coordinates the treatment and prevention of HIV/AIDS, and some people fall between the cracks. If an HTV car-rier refuses to tell sexual partners of his or her condition, there are ways for the authorities to warn them of the risk, but the comptrol-ler found that this effort is not always made.

In addition, people whose Western Bloi confirmation assay - a test given to reconfirm a positive result on an earlier blood test is inconclusive, have not always been located for a re-test; private labs that do HIV tests are not properly supervised; AIDS patients don't always get the drugs they need; an information campaign to prevent HIV infection among Ethiopian immigrants has taken years to implement; and the safety of lab personnel who test the blood samples is not always ensured.

The comptroller looked at the handling of HTV tests at six of the eight public testing centers, and found that although they are sup-posed to have a clinical psycbologist and a social worker to help the doctor inform carriers of their condition, most do not. Patients informed they are carriers could, suicide out of desperation.

due to the lack of information, infect those with whom they have sexual contact, or even commit

In addition, all hui Ichilov Hospital failed to issue a document to those found free of HIV stating they are considered HIV free only up to a certain date, because during a window period of several months they could be infected but the antibodies don't show up in the blood.

Vital medications that can fight hrain infections, tuberculosis and conditions threatening AIDS patients' sight have sometimes been unavailable from health funds. Kupat Holim Clalit told the comptroller this was due to inadequate funding.

The ministry's mishandling of HIV infection among Ethiopian immigrants was well documented hy the Navon Commission last year. The comptroller adds that immigrant children under the age of nine were not tested upon arrival.

The ministry has also performed poorly in preventing the spread of HIV among foreign workers. The contractors that hring in outside laborers are legally responsible for having them tested for HIV in their native countries and ensuring that they have adequate medical insurance here, but these foreign tests cannot necessarily be trusted; the results of HIV tests at private labs here are not necessarily reliable either, the comptroller noted.

The money allocated for HIV prevention and information is inadequate, and even this was not fully spent by the ministry. Most of the funds are used just one day a year - World AIDS Day - rather than to promote awareness all year round. In addition, the ministry's epidemiology department has inadequate and sometimes erroneous information on the number of HIV carriers, even though reporting of such carriers is mandatory.

There are very long delays in investigating complaints of medical negligence, due to ministry red tape and frequent unwillingness hy physicians to cooperate with the investigating committees. Of the 79 investigating com-mittees appointed in 1995, only 60 even began to consider the complaints before them; 16 of the 449 committees set up as far hack as 1990 still haven't reached any conclusions.

In other matters, the comptroller found that the ministry lacks a comprehensive national program for kidney dialysis. The demand for this vital treatment is growing because of the aging of the popu-lation and the influx of immigrants who need dialysis. There are 2,530 such patients today, compared to only 1,665 in 1990.

No iaw prevents anyone from opening a dialysis clinic, and the ministry has failed to set down standards and guidelines for the treatment. For example, the quality of the water used in the process is critical; if it has too much potassium. it can harm the patient and even kill him.

The ministry set NIS 91,000 as the differential payment that the health funds will receive for treating each member that undergoes dialysis for chronic kidney failure. But an independent analysis of the costs found that taking care of a single patient costs the insurer NIS 160,000 a year, creating a disincentive for the health funds to properly care for their members.

In addition, the heavy manpower burdens in bospital nephrology departments due to unrealistic staffing levels set by the ministry

Investment Center squanders grant money

By DAVID HARRIS

The Investment Center of the Industry and Trade Ministry fails to thoroughly check requests for capital investment aid, the comptroller found.

There are lengthy delays between Investment Center discussions of grant bids and their evenrual approval. The center does not budget efficiently, and probably awarded grants to companies that were less deserving than those that were rejected. The report was especially critical of the way the center processed the application of the US computer giant Intel, which is making the largest ever investment in Israel by a foreign company (See Page 12). The principal role of the Investment Center is to approve and distribute investment grants and tax subsidies for new factories. In January 1996 the Finance and Industry and Trade ministers . agreed to set the center's grant budget at NIS 3.59 hillion, of

Plan to computerize schools way off-line

By ARYEH DEAN COHEN

Education Ministry officials responsible for the program to fully computerize the schools made some serious planning and budgeting errors, and even those schools which received computers now have machines that are obsolete.

The program, launched in 1994, to get 55,000 computers into the schools - or one for every 10 pupils - in five years, was not funded aufficiently. Ministry planners also failed to properly estimate the number of computers needed, which updated figures show to be close to 100,000.

This poor planning means that the "five-year program" will take some 10 years, with those schools that are to receive their machines only at the end of the period put at an educational disadvantage.

The program's slow pace is also leaving some schools with computers that are quickly becoming obsolete.

There is no procedure for upgrading or replacing old computers, and schools that were computerized in the early days of the program now find themselves with machines that are incompatible with newer programs that utilize sound and other multimedia functions. This situation is undermining one of the key aims of the program. which the ministry stated is "to close the gap between the school society and the society in the world around it." The ministry was also chided for not ailocating funding to employ computer technicians to maintain the equipment.

Teachers have not been sufficiently trained in how to use the computers in the schools, While two committees recommended 180 training hours per teacher, teachers are receiving an average of only 89 hours of training. There have been no guidelines or curricula established for using the computers as an educational tool. Though software undergoes testing and only approved programs may be purchased, teachers and subject coordinators are left to make their own decisions as to which of the dozens of programs to use. Officials were further faulted for not making the software developers foot more of the bill for the testing. In 1995, the ministry spent NIS 2.3 million on such tests, while the programs' producers paid only NIS 84,000.

LABOR AND SOCIAL AFFAIRS MINISTRY

Youth service workers seriously overloaded

By DAN IZENBERG

The Labor and Social Affairs Ministry's Adolescent and Youth Service is responsible for boys and girls aged 14 and over who are not in an established social framework - school, work or the army. The Program for the Advancement of Youth in the Education Ministry deals with youth aged 14 to 18 who are in danger of dropping out of school, and with the "hard core" youngsters this age who not been in any framework for at least a year.

The report found there was overlap between these two bodies in the care of the 14-to-18-yearolds and even disputes between them over who should be responsible for some target populations. The two bodies keep separate databases, which are not coordinated.

The average caseload for youth workers in the local councils is almost twice as high as it should be - 43 clients per case worker compared to the desirable 25. The distribution is also uneven. In some localities, workers treat an average of 14 to 20 clients each. In others, one worker treats 91 to 119 clients.

The situation in the Arab and Druse sectors is particularly severe. In 1995, there were services for youth at risk aged 14 and up in only 1g of the 95 minority villages north of Hadera.

For the 349 disabled candidates for out-ofhome placement that were wait-listed in 1996, there were only 111 places available.

None of the 18 hostels for the disabled run by private or public organizations was licensed by the ministry, as required by law, and in only one case did the government sign a formal contract with an operator. The ministry has not yet drafted regulations for the licensing and supervision of homes. Ministry district supervisors are thus overseeing the homes in their areas without any objective criteria.

The ministry sends supervisors to examine safety, food and security in the government institutions, but the supervision takes place almost exclusively in the government homes, as opposed to those run hy entrepreneurs or public bodies.

With regard to job retraining programs for the unemployed, courses are generally offered where there were facilities to conduct them, not necessarily in places where the population most urgently needed them.

On average, 44.3 percent of those taking retraining courses found appropriate work, but there were marked differences according to sub-ject and district. For example, 70 percent of those who studies electricity, electronics and hotel work in Tel Aviv found jobs in their area of study. The rate for various courses in other parts of the country was as low as 25 percent.

In response, the Labor and Social Affairs Ministry said the discrepancies between the number of social workers and caseloads in various communities is due to the municipalities' varying levels of resources and that it will ask the Treasury for additional funding.

The ministry also said it is in the process of implementing new programs and expanding services, including youth services, in the Arab sector

SETTLEMENT LOCAL COUNCILS

By MARGOT DUDKEVITCH

The comptroller investigated the local councils of two settlements -Oranii and Elkana - and reported on the inregularities she discovered. In Oranit, she found that the council's annual budgets were being passed late. Nine of the council's workers received global overtime payments without the sums being properly reported. The council also used the services of an engineering company, and then appointed the company's director general to the position of council engineer - an obvious conflict of interest. The salary paid to the

In response, Oranit officials said the town's budget can only be passed after financial grants from the Interior Ministry are transferred. These grants are transferred annual-approval of the budget.

The contract between the engineer and the council was drawn up by the town's former legal adviser, who is now a judge. The engineer's salary is comparable to that paid by other councils, the officials said. In November 1996, the council appointed a storeroom manager who carries out the stock assessment and recording. In Elkana, residents owed the council some NIS 390,000 in amona and water fees. Only two of nine factories situated in the settlement's industrial zone were properly licensed. A gas station that opened in July 1993 was operating without receiving the proper authorization from the civil administration. The settlement's sewage, which illegal additions after the council ran through a treatment facility before spilling into the nearby wadi, still did not meet government standards.

The report also noted the town's inadequate siren tietwork and stressed the need for police to beef up patrols in the area to improve security.

Elkana officials noted that many residents who owe money are in real financial difficulty: nonetheless, the council had informed residents of their debts in writing and had threatened to cut off the water supplies of Mismanagement of a project to expand part of the Tel Aviv-Jerusalem Higbway put the public at risk and cost commuters stuck in severe traffic jams NIS g-million.

The road construction - the addition of a third lane along a 6.5-km stretcb from the Shapirim exit to the Ben-Gurion Airport exit - was completed seven months late, the report said.

During some of that time, no work was done at all, and the flow of traffic was seriously bampered. Some of the delay was caused by the need to redo faulty work.

A contract for the project was awarded to a contractor in September 1994. According to the comptroller's

REPORT OF A calculations the contractor's bid was 31% percent less than the estimated cost of the project, which had itself been lowballed, finally bring in an additional contractor.

The second contractor, bowever, was bronght in without a tender; at a later point, additional contractors were hired, also without tenders.

A visit to the construction site by inspectors from the comptroller's office revealed serious safety faults "which posed a danger to those using the highway.

The construction area lacked proper signs alerting drivers to the traffic changes and lacked sufficient flashing lights, some of which were not working properly.

to commuters. The report noted that even after the new lanes were opened in July 1996, traffic was still hampered, since one part of the road bad still not been completed and construction equipment was still in the area.

All these irregularities led the comptroller to conclude that the PWD was not competent enough to properly manage the project. In response, the department explained the raffic jams by noting that in other parts of the world parts of roads are closed while road work is being done, and traffic is rerouted through detours. However, in Israel, this is generally not possible and traffic mnst flow through while roadwork is being done.

The ministry called the project's construction problems unusual, and the result of the unexpected bankruptcy of the contractor during the construc-

It argued that the second contractor brought in was already working on a project for the department in the area, and agreed to carry out the work at the low price set by the first contractor.

The ministry noted that decisions in the matter had to be made "in real time" with regard to a road that is extremely busy. The department added, bowever, that it bad taken note of the comptroller's comments on delays in work, and would take steps to prevent them.

Highway won't ease traffic flow

By LIAT COLLINS

The comptroller gave the NIS 3.5 billion Trans-Israel Highway (Road No. 6) the red light, criticizing almost every aspect of the road, from the planning to the financial aspects of its maintenance.

The report strongly condemns the fact that the plans for the highway - connecting the Beersheba area to the Yokne'am area and the northern border - are not part of a master plan for a road and transport network. It also bluntly states that the highway will not solve transport problems in the long term, because of the predicted increase in the number of vehicles on the road.

The project also ignores the stated policy from the 1970s, which determined that public transport should get preference over private transport, the comptroller said, noting that public transport is preferable both for environmental reasons and to lower the numbers of traffic accidents.

The comptroller noted the huge predicted increase in pollution and noise, and the impact the road will have on land use patterns. She said the Interior Ministry's planning authority has yet to present a plan to prevent urban sprawl on the land bordering the road, and quotes a Bank of Israel report that warns of both the economic and environmental costs of turning the center of the country into one huge metropolitan area dependent on private transport, instead of developing peripheral areas. She crinicizes the plans for private entrepreneurs to build and operate the highway as a toll road, a decision made by the Finance Ministry despite surveys by the government-owned Trans-Israel Highway Company, which Indicated that putting the roads in private hands would raise the costs.

A survey by the Trans-Israel Highway Co., quoted in the report, found that. "In no Western country, or even in professional literature, are there examples of toll roads of the size of Road No. 6 for which the tolls collected cover the full cost of construction and maintenance."

It also notes that if alternative roads are toll-free, drivers are more likely to use them, further dropping the income from tolls. The government seems to have recognized this when in June 1996, it promised to cover $0 percent of the difference between the entrepreneur's operating costs and the estimated income from tolls.

The report censured the Transport Ministry and others for not encouraging the use public transport, and noted that the common practice of paying workers car allowances combined with the high costs of bus tickets encourages people to use private vebicles. In response, the Transport Ministry said it is working to promote public transport; that apart from improving the public transport infrastructure it has issued monthly travel tickets and improved information for travelers. The government has also decided to open the field to comperition, which, it says, will mprove the service.

The Trans-Israel Highway Co. said since Road No. 6 is the first road of its kind here, there are various scenarios regarding its financial future, including the possibility that the state will buy back the highway.

The company, however, believes the tolls would cover the costs of establishing and operating the

The Postal Authority spent NIS 18,000 to buy a double parafoil for then-director-general Ran Levin to glide in and be photographed for a media campaign promoting the authority. Standard purchasing procedure was ignored, and the purchasing committee approved the expenditure without question.

In the end, Levin never glided: Soon before launching, he was by Communications fired Minister Limor Livnat for serious maladministration involving the purchase and use of the authority's computers.

The authority spent NIS 50 million for equipment and services, of which about NIS 16 million was for the computer communications branch, which employs 71 workers, up from 20 when it was established in 1991. But the authority has never developed a long-term plan for computerization, and a steering committee on this subject hasn't met since 1992. Some NIS 4.5 million was spent on hardware from one company, based solely on that compa-ny's "recommendation of itself." The authority explained that it had no time to solicit bids, as the equipment was needed urgently. in the end, some of the equipment was not unpacked for two years, and other pieces were hardly used.

Last year, the authority spend NIS 5 million to buy a computer for "urgent" use, even though staffers knew in advance that there were problems adapting existing computers to work with the new one. Because of these problems, for six months the computer wasn't used for its original purpose. In late 1995, the authority chose programs for developing and managing databases without testing them. Even before one program was purchased, it was known that its newer versions were incompatible with several central computers. Proper procedures were violated repeatedly in the authority's selection and purchase of computer hardware and software. The comptroller urged the authority, now headed by Moshe Tery, to activate its computerization steering committee and to follow regulations... not glide over them.

By DAVID HARRIS

The costs of managing and marketing savingslinked life insurance - when compared with the premiums in this sector - are far higher than those for deposits in provident and pension funds. Yet, the overall sum of deposits from provident and pension funds are considerably greater than those in savings-linked life insurance plans.

The comptroller noted that for many years the Income Tax and Property Tax Commission offered special exemptions for those insured with managers' insurance and wage-carners' insurance. In this manner, the Treasury has in effect been indirectly subsidizing various programs for managers' insurance and encouraging high wage-earners to purchase managers' insurance despite its excessively high marketing and management costs.

In response, the Treasury pointed out it is still waiting for the cabinet to finish its discussions of the Brodet Report, which suggested reforms in the capital market.

A 1995 report, meanwhile, compiled jointly by the government and Jewish Agency showed that various ministries, especially Immigration and Absorption, Education and Agriculture, were budgeting hundreds of millions of shekels for work that duplicated work being done by the Jewish Agency.

In many areas where the government and the agency work together, there are no written ements or joint management of projects. Work is not logically divided, and as such "there is a total lack of clarity in regard to the budget framework, payments and mutual settling of accounts.

Purthermore, there is no coordination of statisrical information on new jumigrants between the Interior and Absorption ministries and the agency. For example, a team from the Absorption Ministry discovered that in 1994 and 1995 dozens of immigrants "made aliya" a secistry and the agency. Therefore, the nature, sums and recipients of the funds are unknown. The ministry maintains that some money it has transferred to the agency has not reached its intended recipients.

ond time and received full rights again.

The Absorption Ministry said it is now negotiating with the agency over many of the issues the state comptroller mentioned. The accountant-general added that a committee has been established to work on certain issues and will report shortly.

Foreign entrepreneurs looking for land to develop may be granted permission to do so without submitting a tender application if the finance minister and relevant other minister (such as Tourism or Industry and Trade) believe the investment is beneficial to Israel.

However, the Treasury has not fixed its role or that of the other ministry in the process, nor is it clear what the government regards as "beneficial." The comptroller cites several examples where permission was given to foreign investors to operate here, without having gone through the necessary financial checks.

The Treasury responded by saying that most of the investigation into foreign investors should be carried out by the relevant professional ministry. The Tourism Ministry adds that the foreign investors targeted are those who will contribute to the Israeli economy, and that the ministry has established a list of criteria for dealing with such investors.

ISRAEL BROADCASTING AUTHORITY No clear way to rate Channel 33

By LIAT COLLINS

A viewers' survey by the BBC carried out in Jordan in 1995 found that some 10 percent of those interviewed regulariy watched the Israel Broadcasting Authority's Channel 33 satellite station, while a survey among Israeli Jews in 1996 showed viewing figures did not reach even 0.5 percent. There is still no rating system by which to judge the channel, the comptroller noted.

Channel 33 broadcasts are aimed primarily at neighboring Arab states and at Russian-speaking immigrants. It also broadcasts from the Knesset plenum and some committees on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays and has light entertainment programs. The report notes that throughout the 13th Knesset and the start of the 14th, there was no signed agreement between the Knesset and the IBA governing payment for the broadcasts. Although the annual costs were NIS 7 million, the Knesset paid only NIS 1m.

There was also no signed contract between the Absorption Ministry and IBA for the Russian-language broadcasts in 1995. The channel employs 15 people for "extra time," beyond the overtime agreed on within the IBA, but the IBA was negligent in checking hours reported and the comptroller notes discrepancies for 10 workers. There are also at least six deviations from the ban on close relatives working in the same unit.

The channel also allowed commercial products to be shown in its programming, contravening the IBA ban on advertising, including subliminal advertising. Deviations in the regulations on outside productions were also found. The comptroller also reviewed speed up the project.

the plan to concentrate the 16 sites in Jerusalem currently operated by the IBA in one complex at the site of the former Sha'arei Zedek Hospital building. The decision was approved in 1994, but poor progress has been made. The report cites problems with records of real estate assets that were meant to finance the project. The IBA said in response it had held meetings with the relevant bodies and the absorption minister had agreed to budget a certain amount for the Russian-language broadcasts and that the 1998 budget would try to include the costs of Channel 33. Recently the IBA prepared a budget for the station addressing the topic of joint and separate costs. On the Sha'arei Zedek building the IBA said an administration had been established to facilitate and target at 2.75 percent of gross domestic product. This target was not met, the first time a gov-ernment had failed to meet its target since the Budget Deficit Law was passed. The overall budget for 1995 was eventually set at NIS 163.834 billion, some NIS 11b. higher than the government had intended, with actual spending during the 12 months reaching NIS 147.917b. In March the government ment estimate.

Groups of tourists to Eilat are to arrive on flights at the Aqaba Airport, according to Aharon Dekel, chairman of the Eilat Hotel Association. The previous government's decision in 1995 to grant world leading computer-chip maker Intel $600 million, or 38 percent, of its $1.6 billion investment as Kiryat Gat is bound to emerge as a negative investment of up to $343 million, according to State Comptroller Miriam Ben-Porat's annual report published yesterday.

Ben-Porat accused the directorate of the Investment Center in the Industry and Trade Ministry of approving the biggest capital investment aid in Israel's history, despite a report from the Industrial Development Bank of Israel Ltd. which warned that "the investment is not worthwhile for the economy.

The discussion covered the need to negotiate speedily on urgent matters and to appoint arbitrators at a later stage to handle the feud.

One of the potential arbitrators mentioned during the discussion is retired Supreme Court president Meir Shamgar. The need to reach agreement quickly stems from the sensitive situation in which the Eisenberg group finds itself.

Since the original will is apparently missing, and since it is therefore arguably illegal for Erwin Eisenberg to act on behalf of the estate, he needs to arrive at a speedy settlement so that he can act on behalf of the group in various countries including India, China and Korea. Faced with this impasse, Erwin Eisenberg is now willing to waive part of the estate bequeathed to him by his father, so long as an agreement can be concluded quickly.

Betar take on Mac TA in State Cup semis

. .... . .

Bnei Yehuda face Beersheba in early clash

By DEREK FATTAL

This afternoon's soccer State Cup semifinal double bill at the National Stadium Ramat Gan promises to be one the most absorbing afternoons in the season's lengthy soccer calendar. Over 40,000 fans are expected to set the refurbished stadium ablaze with color and a fill it with cacophony of sound as they attempt to lift their heroes into the final.

The hig clash at 5.30 pm features Betar Jerusalem, already on the very brink of winning the National League, against last year's league and cup doublists Maccabi Tel Aviv, while the opening match, beginning at 3 pm, sees this year's Toto Cup winners Bnei Yehuda take on Hapoel Beersheba.

It is no small irony that the Betaris must overcome the very side whose double-winning feat they are hoping to emulate to order to make this one of their best seasons ever. On the other band, a Maccabi victory will put the Tel Svivans bang on course for salvaging what has proved to be a miserable campaign for the club and coach Avraham Grant.

Assuming that Betar will be crowned league champions shortly, a vic-tory by Eli Cohen's men today will entitle the winners of the Bnei Yeliuda and Beersheba clash to compete in the European Cup Winners' Cup, regardless of what transpires in the State Cup final. Maccabi fans will be delighted with the news that Gadi Brumer looks likely to play, and so lend some steel to a defense that has failed to convince too often this campaign. Betar's Eli Ohana will be aiming to increase his current Cup tally of seven goals, but his coach still has to decide who should partner him in attack. Nir Sevilia is the man on form in the Jerusalem front line at present, with three goals from his last two outings, while Ronnen Harazi is still looking to find bis old sharpness. This season's first league meeting between the clubs ended in a 3-3 draw, with Betar celebrating a 1-0 victory in the return match.

There is no question that Hapoel Beersbeba have had the upper hand against the men from the Hatikva Quarter, scoring five times without reply in the two most recent league outings between the sides. Nevertheless Bnei Yehuda have already demonstrated a knack for knock-out competition this season that could make nonsense of the league formbook

Extra time will be played in the event of a tie after 90 minutes, and the ties will be decided on penalties if necessary. The matches will be broadcast live on Kol Yisrael and television's Channel 2.

Clean sweep for Maccabi

By ELI GRONER

Maccabi Tel Aviv overcame a frenetic late flurry by Hapoel Jerusalem to retain the National Basketball League title last night. 86-83. The championship was the 37th overall for Maccabi and the fourth straight. The series sweep was the eighth in a row for the champions, a streak spanning four years. Maccabi has won the title 27 times in the last 28 years.

"We were the best team in the league all season and we won a deserved championship". said Maccabi coach Zvi Scherf. He is there were some shaky moments along the way. With the game seemingly in hand 70-48. Jerusalem reeled off an incredible 35-16 run to close the game out. The spurt was sparked by H.

Waldman, whose phenomenal play singlehandedly rallied Jerusalem. Waldman tallied 15 points (5-6 three pointers) on the evening, along with sensational defense on Oded Katash in the second half.

In the first half though, Katash was unstoppable. Given a free reign throughout the playoffs, a right, but like Maccabi's season, confident Katash played as well as the court for just 30 seconds, contributing 11 points on he ever has, tallying 20 points last night while dishing off several gorgeous assists. Katash utilized a questionable decision by Jerusalem coach Gadi Kedar to start Papi Turgeman, by abusing Turgeman throughout the half.

Turgeman didn'i help Jerusalem with Doron Shefer's fouling out on offense either, committing five turnovers in the first 11 minutes helping Tel Aviv jump out to a 26of the game. Shefer - who became only the third player in Israeli basketball history to win 15 advantage.

Poor decision-making haunted titles on two different teams Jerusalem offensively throughout (Hapoel Galil Elyon) - was solid on both sides of the court; playthe game. At one point in the sec-ond half, Pini Levy, after being on ing an efficient point guard and offense, while shutting down Adi pulled up on a fast break for a Gordon on delense. three-point attempt that missed badly. In addition, Hapoel never tried to take advantage of the fact field goals of the game in the final that Maccabi was forced to play without the suspended Buck Johnson.

ເນເກມເຕ. Gordon's poor effeusive showing was exceeded only by his Jerusalem's late run coincided nonexistent defense. At various points in the game. Gordon played the matador for Sheffer, Katash, Brad Leaf (16 points) and Borko

Radovich (13). Dan Bingenheimer, along with Waldman, paced Jerusalem with 15 points.

Uncool Bulls rally to top Bullets; Rodman ejected

CHICAGO (AP) - The Chicago Bulls lost their cool. They lost Dennis Rodman, 100. They didn't lose the game, however, thanks to Scottie Pippen and Michael Jordan.

Pippen capped a 29-point game by making a go-ahead 3-pointer with 43.9 seconds left and Jordan scored 34 points Tuesday night as Chicago opened the Eastern Conference semifinals with a 100-97 victory over Atlanta.

The defending NBA champions rallied from a 16-point third-quarter deficit despite Rodman's ejection for two technical fouls. Toni Kukoc also was assessed a technical, and the Bulls spent a good chunk of the game either whining to the officials or trying to calm each other down.

But not all the Bulls lost their composure.

Pippen's sixth 3-pointer of the game, after taking a handoff from Luc Longley and curling around a Longley pick, snapped a 97-all tie and finished the scoring.

The Hawks couldn't take advantage of Longley's two missed free throws with 34.5 seconds left and Jordan's missed layup with 10 seconds to go as Mookie Blaylockspoiled an otherwise outstanding individual performance.

Blaylock, who had career playoff highs with 31 points and 12 rebounds, badly missed a 3-pointer with about 35 seconds left, stepped out of bounds after taking an inbounds pass with 32 seconds to go and shot an airball on a 3point attempt at the buzzer.

Chicago will play host for Game 2 today before the best-of-7 series shifts to Atlanta. Jazz 103, Lakers 101 Visiting Los Angeles managed Malone scored 31 points, Jeff Greg Ostertag after Game I, Homacek added 21 and John outscored his rival 25-4 and outrebounded him 12-4. Byron Scott Stockton had 16 points and seven assists for the Jazz, who survived an NBA record setting 7-for-7 3added 24 points. Tuesday's results proved that when the chips were down none of United's rivals were up to the task of maintaining a sustained challenge for the title.

Liverpool, Newcastle and Arsenal have all topped the table during the last nine months but it was United's experience and con-+ fidence that finally secured them the championship for the fourth time in five years.

Newcastle manager Kenny Dalglish said after Tuesday's match: "They are the best team with the best players and they have proved it with the points." Liverpool boss Roy Evans added: "It sticks in the throat that United have won it again and not us but they got the points and to do it again is a top-class performance. But we will be back.

Liverpool's challenge ultimately failed because they were too erratic and dropped 21 points at home. Newcastle's challenge spluttered in mid-season when Kevin Keegan left to be replaced by Cantona himself had a quiet season and generally seemed to be tiring as a player and fading as a creative force. But Roy Keane had an outstanding season driving the midfield, David Beckham proved he had exceptional potential with some outstanding goals and as the sea-son eotered its final weeks, Aody Cole at last began to show why manager Alex Ferguson was willing to pay Newcastle £7 million for him. Rising Norwegian star Ole Solskjaer, bought as a long-term investment at the start of the season, was set to end up as top scorer.

It is no secret that manager Alex Ferguson is keen to improve the side in the summer and is equally desperate to win the European Cup with United.

He knows he will have to strengthen his side if United are to bridge the gap between dominating in England and dominating Europe.

*** FIERCE CREATURES - This all-tooaccurate spoof of corporate take-over culture set in an English zoo, reunites the cast of A Fish Called Wanda, and works just as a follow-up comedy should: instead of confining the actors to > repetition of a few tried-and-true shticks, the filmmakers trust in the ensemble's chemistry, and set them loose to try on new roles. The strength of both pictures lies in John Cleese's script - he wrote the oew movie with film critic lain Johnstone - and in the actors' complementary personalities. While Fierce Creatures does seem a bit tamer than the first movie, it's also marked by flashes of mad inspiration. With Cleese, Kevin Kline, Jamie Lee Curtis and Michael Palin. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Parental guidance suggested.)

**** BIG NIGHT - Sbort-story-sized, modestly budgeted and codirected in sweet, laborof-love style by actors Stanley Tucci and Campbell Scott, this is one of the gentlest American movies of the last several years. The film works as a chamber piece, about two Italian brothers (Tucci and Tony Shalhoub), immigrants in 1950s America, who open a serious restaurant, dedicated to recreating the nonnced tastes and refined flavors of their native Roman cuisine. As they soon learn, however, Eisenhower's America may not be ready for their crostini and sformati: the neople want their spaghetti and meatballs. As in the best films about cooking and eating, the preparation and delectation of various dishes becomes, after a fashion, a recipe for life: the way a character thinks about and acts around food tells us all we need to know about his state of mind and place in the world. Also with Minnie Driver and İsabella Rossellini. (English with some Italian dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Parental guidance suggested.)

The organization has asked the government for 120, so that ambulance driver/medics will not go out on call without either a volunteer or a professional medic on board. To pay for the extra staffers, the government allowed MDA to raise its charges for those who call for an ambulance, which excludes road accident victims. WASHINGTON - The campaign to have compensation paid to Holocaust survivors living in Eastern Europe reached Capitol Hill yesterday, with members of Congress urging Germany to make payments.

American The Jewish Committee, which is leading the move, said that after numerous appeals to German officials, it is taking its case to Congress and to the press because Bonp is unresponsive.

New York Congressman Gary Ackerman, a leading supporter of the AJC's campaign, said he is confident that Bonn will see reason

"We are not up to any legislation. We are hoping the government of Germany ... is going to be supportive of our request, that their understanding is deep." Ackerman said. "We're not interested in anything punitive. There is reason to be hopeful that they fully understand the issue."

He said he is encouraged by Chancellor Helmut Kohl's quick agreement to Ackerman's request that the German list of Waffen pensioners in the US be provided to the Justice Department so that it could be searched for potential war criminals.

Making peace

Internal Security Minister Avigdor Kahalani greets Greek Orthodox Patriarch Diodoros I yesterday, before their meeting at which he tried to mediate the dispute between the Patriarchate and the Moslem Wakf. He also visited the Wakf yesterday. Kahalani predicted it would be difficult to restore the status quo without bloodshed. The ministry announced after the meeting that it is clear the Wakf had occupied two rooms helonging to the Patriarchate, hut suggested a satisfactory compromise might be the payment of compensation to the Patriarchate. The dispute over the construction of toilets at the adjacent mosque is more difficult to resolve, the ministry said. #### Hammer pledges Eitan: Highway will school trip 'revolution' worsen road problems

By ARYEH DEAN COHEN

A "revolution" in school trip procedures to assure maximum security and safety was promised yesterday by Education Minister Zevulun Hammer - just before the State Comptroller's Report, which criocized existing school trip proce-dures, was released. Hammer said the comptroller's report and the Pressler Commission report on the March 13 massacre of seven schoolgirls at Naharayim both indicated that, for several years, trips had taken place that violated ministry guidelines.

There is no room for the Trust me' and 'It'll be okay' attitudes when it comes to such an important and sensitive area," Hammer said. Recommendations from the two reports that will be implemented soon include the establishment of a central body to coordinate issues relating to school trips. A 24-hour command ceoter will be established to deal with any problems that arise, and efforts will be made to ensure chaperones are equipped with weapons and communications equipment Hammer asked Michael Gal, a reserve colonel and former director of the Jerusalem Education Authority, to supervise the new arrangements.

Environment Minister Rafael Eitan said yesterday the fact the State Comptroller's Report severely criticizes virtually all aspects of the Trans-Israel Highway strengthens his opinion that it will not solve the country's transport problems and that funds should be invested instead in developing public transportation.

Speaking at a conference in Jerusalem on transport issues, Eitan said: "The report confirms what I have said for years: This highway is redundant and will not solve - and will probably worsen - the country's traffic problems, while causing irreversible harm to the open landscape, environment, agriculture and natural assets.".

He said it is not too late to stop the work on the road.

Former environment minister Yossi Sarid also strongly opposes the highway.

The Society for the Protection of Nature in Israel held a press conference on the subject and a demonstration against it.

"The state comptroller gave the road a ticket," said SPNI directorgeneral Eitan Gedalyzon. He said the report had listed all the major problems that the society has been warning about.

SPNI is calling for a rail service between peripheral towns and the center of the country and to encourage public transport by changing taxes on private vehicles and replacing car allowances with a general travel allowance.

wounded. Other Hizbullah units opened fire with mortars and light weapons at the IDF troops and a nearby South Lebanese Army position in an apparent effort to cover the retreat of the squad, IDF and SLA gunners returned fire and IAF helicopter gunships were called in. There were no casualties among IDF or SLA troops.

Military sources said that some of the long-range Hizbullah fire had originated from inside villages north of the zone, in violaoon of the Grapes of Wrath understandings.

The five-oation monitoring group established to supervise the understandings convened at UNIFIL's beadquarters in Nakoura yesterday to discuss complaints by Israel and Lehanon.

> Ministry hunts illegal workers

Dozeos of Ethiopian youths, who received tourist visas from the Foreign Ministry to come here as part of a group of pilgrims, descried the group and are illegal-ly trying to find jobs here, the Interior Ministry said.

Ministry officials and police went to the group's hotel yesterday and found all the youths had disappeared. However, two returned to the hotel while the officials were soll there and, in an attempt to escape, one fell to the ground from her fifth-floor room. She was taken to Hadassah-University Hospital in Ein Kerem, Police arrested two Ethiopians; who came to visit other members of the group yesterday. Both have been working here illegally, one for the Nigerian Embassy.

Eyasu Ghebrememari showed police a diplomatic identification card. The Interior Ministry lodged a complaint against the embassy, where he was a driver. (Ium)
